

I am in favor of picking and choosing your own channels instead of being forced into packages of channels no one really wants or needs. I feel that consumers could potentially save money in the long run. If they only watch a few channels, it would be cheaper and they can get what they really want to watch. The cable/satellite companies might then offer channel packages with steep discounts to entice more viewers. This may save everyone money in the long run .